

Stanton Family Law is an all-encompassing term that is used to define many facets of the law as it affects the family. Family Law commonly includes matters related to divorce, child custody, child visitation, child support, paternity, community property, legal separation, prenuptial agreements, annulments, paternity, spousal support, registered domestic partnerships (as provided for by the state legislature), and post marital dissolution matters.

Crimson Law Group, an Orange County Family Law firm, recognizes the unique nature of each of our clients' legal needs and we enjoy helping our clients through a transition into a new and better phase of their lives. As a law firm practicing in Orange County, we provide a comprehensive range of family law services to people throughout Stanton, including but not limited to:

- Divorce / Legal Separations/Annulments

We know that divorce is not an easy thing to go through. What we also know is that divorce doesn't have to be about despair. It can be about dignity and the potential for a better tomorrow. The experience you have oftentimes depends in large part on the attorney you choose to represent you.

We represent individuals in Stanton divorces and divorce-related issues such as custody, alimony, child support, property division, and more. In addition, we offer our Stanton clients the cost-effective, time-saving, and less stressful alternative approaches of divorce mediation and collaborative law. We favor a positive approach designed to achieve the goals of our clients without the need for litigation. Of course, not every case can be resolved this way.

Many clients fear or dread the litigation process, but it does not need to be this way. Oftentimes all a client needs is accurate information. We understand that how a case is litigated can have a dramatic impact on what follows after, and we always advise you accordingly.

- Child Custody / Visitation

California's standards for resolving custody issues are somewhat fluid and can vary depending upon the age and specific needs of the child. In general, however, the court places a premium on maintaining stability and keeping the child's life as change-free as possible. What this often translates into is the presumption that whatever custodial arrangements have prevailed for the last six months should continue unless there are valid reasons for changing them.

This is an important thing to consider if you are thinking about divorce and have children.

Crimson Law Group, an Orange County Family law firm handling Stanton child custody / visitation issues, can advise you on ways to improve your position with the court when considering the well-being of your child. However, because the results of litigation and mandatory psychological evaluations in custody cases are unpredictable, we also explain what the alternatives to litigation are, and the chances for a successful outcome that each legal option entails.

- Property Division

We represent spouses and registered domestic partners throughout the Orange County and the Stanton region in divorce and dissolution, and in the separation of community and non-community property.

California is a community property state. This means that any property acquired during the marriage will be divided equally between the spouses. However, because what each person brings into a marriage naturally tends to become co-mingled with marital assets over time, it is important to take great care in analyzing each client's unique situation in detail. It must be done right the first time.

- Termination of Parental Rights / Step-Parent Adoption
- Adoption
- Guardianship / Grandparent's Rights
- Paternity Matters
- Registered Domestic Partnerships
- Domestic Violence / Restraining Orders
- Child & Spousal Support
